

A wide-angle, low-angle shot of a massive stadium filled with spectators. The stadium's roof is a complex, high-ceilinged structure of steel beams and glass panels, through which the warm, orange light of a setting or rising sun is streaming. The sun is positioned behind a series of large, white, cylindrical pillars that support the roof. The crowd is dense, filling the tiered seating areas. In the foreground, a blue banner with white text is visible, partially obscured by the text overlay. The overall atmosphere is one of grandeur and anticipation.

Forewords

This trip is bit of a dream come true for me. Growing up, watching the World Cup and the EURO is the only times I'm allowed to stay up late. And while everyone know how much football matter to every Europeans and South Americans, I bet you didn't know Vietnamese people move different when its come to the beautiful game. Now I have traded mỳ gõ at my grandparents house for beers and hot dogs at the stadium, but trust that the same child were still yelling at the refs for questionable calls.

It must also be stated that the competition is run on complete and utter corruptions, but you must also understand that I am very proud to be able to take my parents to see the corruption live. Also I stole the title of this book from an AirBnB ad, oops.

About Tony

I wouldn't even call myself a photographer. But since I started taking film photos, there have been a desire to share them in a more meaningful manner beside social medias. So this and all photo books will be available for free viewing digitally on my website, or physically at my residence.

P.S: I started film photography because I became obsessed with the brand CONTAX, so if anyone wanna sell theirs let me know!
